In the last correspondence, the Examiner held claims 12 and 13 as being allowable reasoning that it was, "not necessarily obvious that the catalyst would be packaged with the crosslinker/chain extender." Upon careful reconsideration of the Examiner's reason for indicating allowable subject matter in these claims, it has been concluded that this statement was erroneous and shortsighted. Of course, the catalyst, the introduction of which to facilitate a more rapid reaction is practiced ubiquitously throughout the chemical art, would be packaged with the polyamide compound so that the silane-functionalized polyurethane would be precluded from undergoing premature curing during storage. The Examiner sincerely regrets any inconvenience this error may have caused Applicant.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 12 and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Roesler et al., U.S. Patent #5,919,860. To reiterate, the incorporation of a catalyst into a curable composition is known to the skilled artisan. "It is prima facie obvious to add a known ingredient to a known composition for its known function." In re Lindner 173 USPQ 356; In re Dial et al 140 USPQ 244. Placement of the catalyst in the second part enhances the storage stability of the composition.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1 and 2 are allowable. The Examiner could conceive of no reason why it would have been obvious to add an epoxy resin to either dispersion described in the previous correspondence.
